FALL 2020 Tier III

21G.735 Advanced Topics in Hispanic Literature and Film: Apocalyptic Fictions in/Latin America
How do you recognize the end of the world when you see it? Why are apocalyptic narratives so compelling? What are some of the ways in which apocalyptic thinking might be politically productive? In other words, can one “stop worrying and start loving” it? This class will explore the narrative structure and social functions of apocalyptic thought, with an emphasis on philosophy, literature, film, and popular culture from and about Latin America. Topics of discussion include the encounter of medieval apocalyptic thought with the new continent, the Cuban Missile Crisis and the nuclear threat during the Cold War, femicide and structural violence, and the Latin American responses to, and experiences of extractivism in the context of the present climate emergency. Taught in Spanish. HASS-H
TR, 7-8:30, P. Duong

21G.739 Globalization and its Discontents: Spanish-Speaking Nations
Studies new paradigms of cultural exchange that have shaped Latin America in the 20th and 21st centuries. Examines how globalization is rapidly changing the identity of peoples and cultures in Spanish-speaking nations. Taught in Spanish. HASS-H
MW, 1-2:30, J. Terrones
